

The concept map explores the relationships between Governance, Corporate Culture, Compliance, and Risk Management in an organisation. These elements affect the organisation's performance and decision-making. Governance is the central framework that sets objectives, manages risks, ensures compliance, and oversees resource management. When Governance fails in compliance, creates new risks for risk management. On the other hand, Governance relies on the information provided by risk management for informed decision-making. Additionally, Corporate Culture has a positive role in Governance. Corporate Culture also influences decision-making processes and stakeholder needs, reflecting the organisation's values and behaviours. Compliance is achieved by aligning objectives and managing risks effectively. Risk Management considers potential threats and informs decision-making. Governance monitors KPIs against objectives and influences decision-making.
