An organization is directed, overseen, and held accountable by Governance. Governance is responsible for ensuring that the needs, conditions, and options of Stakeholders are evaluated to determine objectives. Governance ascertains that risks are managed appropriately. Threats are reduced by Risk Management strategies and, when untreated, can lead to consequences that can harm the Organization. An Organization exists within a context that creates Threats and affects Corporate Culture which influences the conduct of the Organization itself. Organizations and Stakeholders, which can be singular entities or Organizations, create Requirements to achieve their goals. The Requirements that mandatorily need to be fulfilled are called Compliance.
