

[113] Governance establishes the [117] corporate culture and driving adherence to [118] ethical values.

[130] Compliance is influenced by [117] corporate culture, where a company's [118] ethical values shape its regulations and rules.

[150] Management holds the responsibility for defining and implementing business [122] strategies, as well as establishing and directing the [119] organizational structure to execute these strategies. Additionally, [150] management integrates [140] risk management practices into decision-making processes.

The [159] maturity of an organization reflects its ability to effectively integrate [113] governance principles. [159] Maturity becomes evident in the development of sound [122] strategies and the implementation of responsible [140] risk management practices.