Description:

The concept map shows how different parts of a business connect and work together. It starts with [104] Stakeholder Engagement, which shapes how [113] Governance, or the way a company is run, works. Governance influences [117] Corporate Culture—the company's personality and values—and [130] Compliance—making sure the company follows rules. These rules come from a [135] Regulatory Framework, which is a set of official rules that need [150] Internal Controls, like checks and balances, to work properly. These controls help [140] Risk Management, which is about dealing with potential problems before they happen. Risk Management uses [145] Risk Assessment to check plans against what could go wrong, helping set good [155] Strategic Objectives, or goals. These goals then loop back to influence how stakeholders are engaged with. The map ties it all together with [120] Ethical Standards—basic ideas of right and wrong—that affect the company's culture and touch every part of the map, showing how everything in a business is connected.
