110996 – Diogo José Madureira Pereira

[113]Governance guides an [100]Organization by providing the needs to achieve the purpose of the [100]Organization. The [100]Organization has a [117]Corporate Culture based on [118]Ethics, and this culture shapes the [113]Governance mechanisms to reach the desired [130]Compliance and the objectives of the [100]Organization. By achieving this [130]Compliance, the [100]Organization is meeting an important goal. [113]Governance also enables the execution of [140]Risk management by proving what needs to be done and how the risks must be managed. A small part of the [140]Risk Management process consists in identifying [141]vulnerabilities and analyzing [142]threats. These [142]threats can possibly exploit [141]vulnerabilities and cause a [143]Risk event that has a [144]Consequence as an output