The [100] organization-concept is an "umbrella"-concept that spans both [343] Project Management, [300] IT service management and [321] Business Continuity. Part of the organization's strategy is to decide how to conduct their [343] Project Management and how to achieve [321] Business Continuity. [159] Maturity is linked with [321] Business Continuity such that if business continuity is not achieved to a satisfactory degree, this will adversely affect [159] Maturity. [149] Control (Risk) is important in order to achieve a desired level of [321] Business Continuity. For [146] Control (Risk) to be achieved, [142] Threat (Risk) must be properly identified, and adverse [144] Consequences (Risk) must be avoided.
